Utopia Film Festival 2008 Offers Utopian Visions and Diversity

by Susan Gervasi

When FDR's New Deal planners designed Greenbelt, they understood the power of cinema to entertain, enlighten and encourage – so they put a movie theater in its town center.

That historic theater – now the P&G Old Greenbelt Theatre – will be part of the fourth annual Utopia Film Festival the weekend of October 24 through 26. Other venues include the Greenbelt Community Center, Greenbelt Municipal Building and Beltway Plaza Mall's Academy Stadium Theatres. More than 40 independent features, documentaries, animations and experimental works will be screened.

"Film has been a part of Greenbelt since it was formed in 1937," said actor and filmmaker Chris Haley, now in his third year as Utopia's executive director. "The Utopia Film Festival carries on that tradition and this year's Utopia offers something for everyone, from love stories to hard-hitting documentaries and programs for kids. Utopia 2008 runs the gamut of subject matter and cinematic styles."

One offering is "Canvas," starring Joe Pantoliano of the "Sopranos" television show and Marcia Gay Harden, who portrays a wife and mother challenged by mental illness. "Canvas" is being screened in collaboration with the Prince George's County chapter of the National Alliance for Mental Illness. After the film, Annapolis resident Melissa Danielson will answer questions and discuss her own struggle with bipolar disorder.

A different kind of challenge is the subject of "BLAST!," which documents a perilous scientific NASA mission to the Arctic and Antarctic to launch a revolutionary telescope. Two other films - "Alaska Far Away: The New Deal Pioneers of the Matanuska Colony" and "At Home in Utopia" - explore Utopian communities formed during the era when Greenbelt was born. Participants in the making of "BLAST!" and "At Home in Utopia" - about a utopian housing experiment in the Bronx - will attend the screenings and answer audience questions.

A grimmer side of American history is investigated in the compelling documentary "Yokes and Chains," which deals with the legacy of the transatlantic slave trade and focuses on a controversial Annapolis event several years ago that used literal yokes and chains to promote racial reconciliation.

But along with serious subjects, music has always been part of Utopia. Several films are geared to music lovers, including "Throw Down Your Heart" – about banjo virtuoso Bela Fleck's trip to Africa in search of the banjo's African roots – and "In the Panyard," about steel pan music in Trinidad.

Films on Politics

Meanwhile, with the Presidential election looming, several Utopia films involve politics. "Frontrunner" tells the story of a woman who defied tradition by running for president of Afghanistan. "RFK" examines the 1968 assassination of Robert F. Kennedy and a 40-year-battle to uncover the facts surrounding it. And "American Feud" explores the nation's left-right political schism

Utopia will also offer the fourth annual urban/rural program of experimental films, this year featuring works from Israel, France and Canada, along with a film shot in China. Another popular Utopia feature returns with a free October 25 screening at the Greenbelt Library of young peoples' animation works. The 1940s African American film "Blood of Jesus" will also be shown free of charge October 25 in the library, followed by a

Greenbelt Elementary Kids Show Walking to School Is Safe, Fun

by Megan Gustafson

The air was crisp and cool last Wednesday morning as students from Greenbelt Elementary walked to their school from four different meeting places around the city.

Accompanied by parents and community representatives and with officers from the Greenbelt Police Department watching out for their safety, the kids arrived at school with energy and enthusiasm, ready to begin another day of learning.

As the children gathered in front of the school for a picture before heading inside, Greenbelt Mayor Judith Davis and Councilmember Leta Mach talked about their participation in two walks – the one to Greenbelt Elementary and the one that took place earlier that morning, to Springhill Lake Elementary.

"It's fun, especially when it's a social thing," Davis said of walking to school.

"It's always fun to be on the [Spellman] overpass and see a traffic jam" knowing you can, as a walker, keep moving, said Mach

Eight-year-old Sofie Dabelko and 7-year-old Elizabeth Gardner, both said walking to school was fun. "We held signs and walked to school. We like to say, 'Drive carefully, school's open!" Sofie said

Elizabeth said her "favorite part of the walk was walking past everywhere" and "that lots of people joined us."

Council Addresses Issue Of Illegal Road Signage

by Barbara Hopkins

Penalties for posting illegal signage on City of Greenbelt rights-of-way are to become stiffer as a result of action taken by the city council on Monday, September 22. With Councilmember Leta Mach away, council voted four to zero to approve an ordinance introduced by Mayor Judith Davis at council's meeting on September 8 to amend the city code to make posting illegal signs a municipal infraction.

In response to concerns from Joan Falcão that the original text of the ordinance would prohibit residents from advertising such things as yard sales and community events, the language of the ordinance was modified in ways that the city attorney believes are insubstantive. Permission from the city is required for posting any signs on its property.

The ordinance establishes the fine for the first violation at $100. Fines escalate to $200 for the second violation and $400 for additional violations. Each sign and each day the sign is posted is considered a separate violation.

Discussion at the meeting centered around difficulties of enforcement, since phone numbers on signs may not actually lead to those responsible for posting the signs. As far back as June 2007, a Greenbelt citizen addressed council on at least two occasions asking for increased enforcement of what he termed "roadside spam."

Greenbelt East Now Split Into Two Voting Precincts

Registered voters in Greenbelt have been receiving in the mail voter notification cards providing information on a number of topics. These include the various districts that encompass Greenbelt – the legislative district (22); congressional district (05); school board district (01); and councilmanic district (004). Information is shown in English and Spanish.

Also shown in the middle of the card is the polling place the voter should report to on November 4. For voters in the North End, Center and Greenbelt West (Empirian Village, the former Springhill Lake Apartments), precincts will remain the same as in the previous presidential election.

For residents of Greenbelt East there was a significant change starting with the February 2008 primary when a single precinct was split in two. Half of the voters who had traditionally voted at Eleanor Roosevelt High School will now vote at Turning Point Academy on Good Luck Road. Voters in Greenbelt East should check their registration cards closely for their polling place. How the precinct was divided is detailed below.

Election Precinct 21-13 was split into two precincts with different polling places, thereby creating a fifth precinct within the city, 21-18. The change affects voters living in Greenbelt East – all that part of the city east of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway and the Capital Beltway and north of Good Luck Road.

According to data provided by the county Board of Elections, Precinct 13 contains all of Greenbriar Condominiums, Greenwood Village and Glen Oaks to the north of Greenbelt Road. To the south of Greenbelt Road, the new boundaries of Precinct 13 include every thing north of Ora Glen Drive between Hanover Parkway and Mandan Road. The centers of the streets listed are the dividing line between the two precincts. This area includes most of the Windsor Green development and a piece of Greenbrook Village.

The polling place for Precinct 13 remains the same, Eleanor Roosevelt High School.

Precinct 18

Precinct 18 contains the remaining portion of Greenbelt East not included in Precinct 13. The new precinct contains all of the area south of Greenbelt Road except for that part between Hanover Parkway and Mandan Road north of Ora Glen Drive. It includes the developments of Green Spring, Greenbrook Estates, Greenbelt Lake Village, Hunting Ridge and parts of Greenbrook Village and Windsor Green. Although not within the city limits, the Hanover apartments east of Hanover Parkway also are within this precinct.

Turning Point Academy at 7800 Good Luck Road is the polling place for new Precinct 18. This school lies within the corporate limits of Greenbelt but has a Lanham address.

Bush; also appearing are Jeffrey Wright as Colin Powell and Richard Dreyfus as Dick Cheney. James Cromwell portrays George H. W. Bush, the other half of the fraught father-son relationship at the heart of this story. (Rated PG-13 for sexual references, substance abuse and disturbing images of war.)

Bahá'í Teachings: How do we build unity and abolish hatred and prejudice?

We must bring our thoughts and actions in line with a belief in the oneness of humankind. When a thought of war enters our minds, immediately replace it with a thought of peace. When a feeling of hate takes shape in our hearts, replace it with a feeling of love. Do everything possible to overcome prejudices, which are among the greatest obstacles to building a better world. The Bahá'í writings teach us how to walk in the ways of unity and help others take the same path.

Learn About Islam

Every breath that we breathe is a blessing from God and we learn from the Prophet Solomon (peace be upon him) to recognize these blessings each day. The Holy Qur'an tells us how he never forgot to be thankful to God. He is quoted to have said, "This is by the grace of my Lord, to test me whether I am grateful or ungrateful! And if any is grateful, it is (a gain) for his own soul; but if any is ungrateful, truly my Lord is free of all needs, supreme in - The Holv Qur'an, 27:40

The documentary, "Fury for the Sound - The Women at Clavoquot" (52 min.) will be shown at the New Deal Café on Monday, October 20 at 7 p.m. It is offered by the Reel and Meal at the New Deal, a monthly film series exploring vital environmental and social issues, sponsored by a consortium of Greenbelt organizations interested in preserving the environment. This month's Reel and Meal film is a special preview in advance of the Utopia Film Festival October 24 through

There is no charge for admission to the October 20 preview event. Beginning at 6:30 p.m., an optional vegan buffet meal will be available for purchase from the Café's Chef Karim.

This powerful, inspiring film shows how elderly women and children, aged 8- to 82-years-old were arrested and jailed defending public land. "Fury for the Sound" expresses with passionate clarity how a small group of dedicated activists came together to protest clearcutting of the local rainforest and 15 years later found themselves in the midst of the largest civil disobedience action in Canadian history - the battle to save Clayoquot Sound on Vancouver Island.

After a discussion of "Fury for the Sound" representatives from the Utopia Film Festival will discuss many of the films that will be shown during the weekend and will have passes for the event available for sale.

New Project Manager Joins City Planning Department

by Jon Sham

Jeffrey Thames, the Planning and Community Development Department's new hire who started his position as project manager in July, will oversee completion of many new projects both he and Greenbelt have in mind.

Jeffrey Thames

Thames grew up in Harrisburg, Pa., and attended Temple University in Philadelphia, where he graduated with a degree in electrical engineering. He then moved to this area, began his career at Westinghouse Electric Corporations and worked for Verizon for 12 years as an engineering specialist and project manager, "basically," he says, "what I'm doing right now."

While at Verizon, Thames became a certified project manager and finished a master's degree in business from Johns Hopkins University. He then moved to Greenbelt because, he says, "Greenbelt has a lot of good projects."

The Greenbelt Metro Station is one of those projects. "A massive project of that size and getting involved with developers and getting involved with the city . . . it fits into my background," he says.

At the Metro station, Thames says, they've finished the curbs and gutters, as well as the asphalt for entrances and exits. They have also finished the Greenbelt Station Project bridge which connects Greenbelt Road to the station and helps with construc-

His role in this project involves inspection, daily reports and keeping contractors working in accordance with specifications.

And while progress on the station is going well so far, he admits there is no projected date for completion. "It really depends on when the developers get in there . . . start doing the building," he says. "Economic conditions really dictate when things start moving at this point."

Public Projects

Other projects in his sights are renovating the Greenbelt theatre, the parking lot at the police station and a major four-phase WSSC water main project: "We plan on redoing everybody's water, the incoming water into their house - everyone in Greenbelt," he says. He hopes to start monitoring that project sometime next year.

Outside of work, Thames likes to travel. Mentioning the Caribbean Islands, he says he loves beaches and relaxing environments. He also loves basketball and sports in general. He doesn't have a favorite team, but he likes to play "as often as my body will allow me to."

Although all of her peers are now serving as principals in schools around the county and state, Reynolds-Lawson is thrilled to be at GES. She is enthusiastic about serving with GES principal Kimberly Seidel. She says that Seidel, in her second year at GES, is providing guidance on practical issues related to being a new principal.

Seidel praises Reynolds-Lawson as "a great addition to our staff . . . with a vast amount of experience."

Reynolds-Lawson describes GES as "running like a well-oiled machine." It is important to see "how a good school is run," she states and says that she plans to replicate much of what she is learning at GES in her future school.

She is impressed with the dedication of the GES teachers, whom she describes as "well-prepared" and "collaborative." She also praises the parents, saying they "send their kids to school ready to learn."

Fluent in French

In addition to her specialized academic training, Reynolds-Lawson brings several other skills to GES. She is fluent in Spanish and French. French was her major at the University of Maryland before she switched to education in her senior year. She earned her teaching certificate at Bowie

While teaching French to talented and gifted students at the Eugene Burroughs Middle School in Accokeek, she enjoyed coaching the dance team. Her jazz and pop dance teams competed throughout the country, winning a national championship one year. She also was selected as National Coach of the Year for dance.

Reynolds-Lawson plans to teach dance routines to GES' sixth-grade girls. She says that dance is more than performing; it is also about public speaking, singing and confidence-building.

In 2005 Reynolds-Lawson traveled every weekend with the television star Vanna White and the film crew of Wheel of Fortune auditioning contestants for the show.

With a five-year-old daughter of her own, Reynolds-Lawson appreciates her 30-minute commute from her Capitol Hill home to Greenbelt. She brought her daughter to the Labor Day Festival, participating in the parade with the GES students.

She finds Greenbelt very welcoming. "I love the diversity here," she remarks. She enjoys shopping at the Co-op Supermarket and reading the News Review, looking for and recognizing the names and photos of GES families and children.

'Greenbelt is an amazing community. I have a dream job in a dream school," she says with a broad smile. She hopes she will be able to complete the school year at GES before she receives her next assignment.

are the best things parents can give their children, said Mimi Noorani, a mother of twins who are in the first grade at Greenbelt Elementary.

Physical activity in the morning "opens up the senses, and gets the brain in a healthy state for learning," she said.

Noorani said walking to school is a sustainable activity: "If you didn't do it today, you can do it any day of the year."

And as for safety, "in most neighborhoods, it's safer to walk than drive," Noorani said.

Officer Marty Parker of the Greenbelt Police Department agreed that walking to school is a safe thing to do. "This is a very good, safe community, an easy community to walk through," he said.

The following are some tips from Officer Parker for walking to school safely:

- Have kids walk in groups;
- Wear bright clothing;
- · Teach kids to stop and look at intersections before crossing and to listen and keep their eyes
- Use rolling backpacks to ease back strain from heavy backpacks;
- · Have an adult walk with kids if possible;
- · Instruct kids that if they see something that doesn't seem right to tell someone.

These events are co-sponsored by the Greenbelt Association for Visual Arts (GAVA) and the county library system.

Programming

Utopia programming chairperson Erica Ginsberg is a filmmaker who moved to Greenbelt in part because the city had preserved its historic movie theater.

"Even as Utopia continues to grow and attract submissions from around the world and festival-goers from throughout the D.C. area, it never strays from Greenbelt's ideals," she said. "Even the way that we select the films – by committee vote rather than selections by a single programmer – is something you'd probably find in few other places.

Documentaries – as well as features - can focus attention on what keeps people down as well as what lifts them up. This year for the first time, the festival will give a Utopian Vision Award to the work which best reflects the ideals of Greenbelt by telling a story which looks at issues of community-building, promoting diversity, bettering social and economic conditions or preserving the environment.

City Is Working to Solve

by Leslie Riddle

Rat Problem in Center

As humans we are often amused by four-legged furry friends and may find ourselves humanizing their behavior. Sit in the park for an hour or so and vou can be thoroughly entertained by those bushy-tailed pint size bundles of energy we call squirrels. We also have our resident chipmunks, beaver, muskrats and groundhogs - species that we have learned to live with and tolerate within our urban environment.

We have also learned to tolerate rather than appreciate less desirable creatures in the rodent family: rats and mice. They invade homes and businesses, causing considerable destruction and financial loss. Rats are the most common pest in cities; they are not native to the United States and have only a few predators.

While rats can be a significant problem within urban environments, they are also living creatures and need to be dealt with in a humane manner. An arsenal of ways have been developed to quell these creatures, but it is important to realize the impact of these controls on our environment and other living things.

As noted above, the city has a current problem with rats around Roosevelt Center. Many residents have informed the public works official about the problem. The department recognizes that it is imperative to reduce the rat population and is implementing trapping and other controls.

traps, will not be set outside where they are accessible to children or adults, chipmunks or squirrels. If this type of trap is employed, it will be set in secure locations, such as the basement of the movie theater, accessible only to the rats and pest control professionals.

So that everyone is well informed, here are some steps being taken to mitigate the current rodent problem:

- 1. Ground cover in the beds surrounding the center has been trimmed down.
- 2. Plants that provide cover for rodents have been trimmed or removed.
- 3. All trash receptacles will be covered and secured.
- 4. Exterminator visits have been stepped up to twice a
- 5. Snap traps may be placed in areas that are secure from the
- 6. All businesses are requested to secure their food products and garbage containers so they are not accessible to rodents.

The most critical issue with rodents is good sanitation and removing their food source. Doing so will also require the cooperation of all who visit Roosevelt Center. It is important to refrain from feeding other furry friends, as this well-intentioned act may also provide food for the unwanted guests. People should not leave food out for feral cats as this food will also attract ro-

With the public's assistance, Public Works is confident that these actions will reduce the rat population significantly. If there are questions call Greenbelt Public Works at 301-474-8004 Monday through Friday from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Roosevelt Center, Historic City Topics for Next Two Workshops

by Frank DeBernardo

Two separate workshops on Saturday, October 25 and Sunday, October 26 will explore new ideas about Roosevelt Center and the historic central part of the city. The ideas, generated at the Greener Greenbelt Charrette in September 2007, include the following:

- Providing for more diversity of uses and using a "green" approach at Roosevelt Center;
- Considering incorporating residential spaces above and around the center to make it more active throughout the day;
- Providing more retail options such as a consignment or thrift shop or a hardware store. Take advantage of the slope behind the Mother and Child statue to create an amphitheater and rain garden; and
- Providing for the ecological health of Greenbelt Lake.

Both workshops will run from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. at Greenbelt Baptist Church at the corner of Crescent and Greenhill Roads. The workshop on Saturday, October 25, will focus on the Roosevelt Center, while the workshop on Sunday, October 26 will focus on the neighborhood of Historic Greenbelt.

Each workshop will begin with a slide show which will demonstrate innovative ideas and designs. Following the Roosevelt Center workshop a panel will discuss the ideas from a variety of perspectives: Kim Kash, president of the Roosevelt Center Merchants Association; Margaret McFarland, director of the University of Maryland's Real Estate Development Program; Celia Craze, director of Greenbelt's Planning and Community Development Office; and Brian Kelly, professor of architecture at the University of Maryland, who facilitated the Roosevelt Center focus group at the charrette. "The panel discussion will help those interested in a brighter future for Roosevelt Center 'get real' about the challenges and opportunities of revitalizing the center," says Jim Cohen, co-chair of the Greener Greenbelt Initiative. "The retail ideas and the design options are appealing, but is there a sufficient market for the suggested stores? What about financing for redevelopment? Cooperation of the owners? Popular support for adding density to the Center? The October 25 discussion will help us get clarity on what the next steps need to be."

Sunday's Workshop

The workshop on Sunday, October 26, with a similar format, will examine the neighborhood of Historic Greenbelt. Following a slide show, leaders from local environmental, naturalist and transportation organizations will respond to the feasibility of the charrette proposals.

The topics will include historic trees and forest cover, stormwater management, Greenbelt Lake, pathways and their lighting and enhancing transit, and bicycle and pedestrian options.

"In discussing the Roosevelt Center and the city's historic core, the Greener Greenbelt Initiative needs the perspectives of a wide variety of Greenbelt citizens," Cohen stated. "We hope to find workable solutions that will help Greenbelt continue to be a model community for the nation."

The fourth and final workshop of this series, focusing on the Greater Greenbelt Region, will take place on Sunday, November 2 from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., at Greenbelt Baptist Church.

Minor Construction Delays Slow Greenbelt Road Traffic

by Christian Kloc

Orange cones that mark continuing construction at the intersection of Hanover Parkway and Maryland. Route 193 will remain until November, a State Highway Administration (SHA) official said. A few "minor setbacks" in the $1.7 million project kept crews from finishing sooner, David Buck of the Maryland SHA communications office said.

Four sections of unfinished sidewalk are obstructed, including a dirt area pedestrians must walk through to cross Greenbelt Road, while two sections are completely blocked off with metal rods sticking out of the ground. The entire project was originally due to be finished last summer.

In an email to the News Review, Greenbelt resident Deborah Bustin said the delay has left the asphalt uneven and full of holes, impeding her daily commute. "[Drivers] have to really concentrate to avoid the many pits and holes," Bustin wrote, "while at the same time trying to watch out for the buses [merging] back into main traffic after picking up passengers at Greenway Center."

Crews from Omni Excavators in Bladensburg hope to finish curb and gutter installation in the next few days, then lay wire for a traffic signal, Buck said. After the electrical work, they will start repaving, which requires at least 50-degree temperatures, he said.

"I don't know what they're doing," said Melanie Adams, an employee at Wells Fargo Financial on Greenbelt Road, who called work on the project "sporadic"

Others who live and work near the intersection also had no idea why the construction was happening.

An October 2007 press release said construction was designed to relieve traffic congestion in the intersection by adding a dual left turn lane from eastbound Greenbelt Road to northbound Hanover Parkway. Other tasks included drawing of new pavement markings and repair of concrete medians, drainage systems and sidewalks. The contractor for the road work is Omni Excavators, Inc. of Washington, D.C.

Ladybugs - Find Them, Photograph and Send Them

by Don Comis

After learning that the Lost Ladybug Project (www. lostladybug.org) is enlisting the public's help to find disappearing ladybugs, I decided to add ladybugs to my inventorying of Greenbelt wildlife. I had seen a pale orange ladybug in my house weeks before knowing about the project but I didn't think much about it.

After learning about the project, I was thinking about building a net to catch some and photograph them, when "plop," a ladybug landed right next to my bathroom mirror one morning.

I took a really close look this time, counting 15 or more black spots on the ladybug, noting the pale orange color, and a yellow "neck," which I found out later is called a pronotum.

I took that information to a link at the Lost Ladybug Project site and used their guide to guess it was an Asian lady beetle. I only wish I had known that the Asian lady beetle is the only ladybug with an "M" or "W" on its pronotum (depending on how you look at it).

Mine was a good guess because Asian lady bugs have a habit of trying to spend the winter hibernating in people's homes.

So join me in going to the Lost Ladybug site, making a net, capturing some ladybugs, photographing them and sending their photographs to Cornell University for identification. We only have through the end of October before the ladybugs try to hide to hibernate all winter. Then in the spring we can once again take pictures of ladybugs, as well as count bees and disappearing lightning bugs as part of other citizen science projects, also found in links at www.lostladybug.org.

The Lost Ladybug Project is modeled after other citizen science projects begun by the National Audubon Society, such as eBird, launched in 2002 by the Cornell Lab of Ornithology and the National Audubon Society.

The projects mentioned in this article invite people of all ages to participate with or without related skills, education or experience. They are a great way to introduce young people to nature and science, as well as for the rest of us to stay young while helping the planet.

History

Blue Star Service Banners, sometimes called Blue Star Flags, have long been a part of the nation's wartime history. They have been hung in the windows of the families of service men and women since World War I. These banners first became a way in 1917 for households to indicate they had family members in the

At that time, in World War I, Army Capt. Robert L. Queissner designed this symbol in honor of his two sons who were serving on the front line.

It quickly became traditional for a gold star to represent a soldier who had died serving his country. Theodore Roosevelt's family had a banner with a gold star in honor of their son who was shot down over France in "The Cone of Uncertainty" recounts his escape from flooded New Orleans on a stolen school bus with "a magical-realist Latino voodoo aesthetic.'

Following the performance, Torres Tama will explore with the audience the role of the performance artist as a social provocateur and take up issues concerning race and class in the United States, the historical context of the storm and the displacement of thousands of Latinos.

Halloween Flight Night Belair Mansion Shows Ogle Landscape Art

The Belair Mansion's currently displayed art exhibit, "A Polite Recreation: Landscape Drawings by the Ogle Family," offers visitors a rare opportunity to enjoy a glimpse of one of the early 19th century's most popular leisure

The creation of artistic drawings was a popular pastime for both men and women in the late 18th and early 19th centuries. While ladies generally confined their work to flowers and other "feminine" subjects, gentlemen favored landscapes and architectural subjects. The exhibit brings together 17 drawings by Benjamin Ogle, II, the owner of Belair from 1815 to 1844.

The exhibit is open to the public during the Mansion's hours Tuesday through Sunday from noon to 4 p.m. Admission is free. Belair is located at 12207 Tulip Grove Drive in Bowie. For details call 301-809-3089 or email museumevents@cityofbowie.org.

Karan Temple True gets a smooth from a friendly dolphin.

Greenbelter Gets a Wet Smooch

Greenbelt resident Karan Temple True got a kiss from a dolphin last summer in Roatan, an island off the coast of Honduras and Guatemala. True was there for a week and a half on a scuba diving trip with friends. Between dives, they visited an area where people can swim with, pet and feed dolphins. They're warm and smooth, True says, and they do all sorts of squeaking and squawking to interact with people.

True has been diving for 12 years. She learned by taking classes at the Greenbelt pool and from a friend. She's taken trips to the North Carolina coast, the Florida Keys, the Cayman Islands and elsewhere in the Caribbean. Her next trip will be in October, when she'll head to Cozumel, off the coast of Mexico near Cancun

Garden Club to Hear About Heritage Roses

The Beltsville Garden Club will meet on Wednesday, October 22 at 7:30 p.m. in the cafeteria of the James E. Duckworth School, 11201 Evans Trail in Beltsville. Nick Weber will talk about his experience with heritage roses.

Infatuated with old garden roses, Weber bought 5.5 acres of land in 1985 to devote to caring for and displaying roses. Rose gardens now surround the house, including two main display gardens, each with a lily pond, one of which has an elevated pavilion to view its half-acre of old and new roses. He currently has 600 to 700 varieties of roses. Other smaller specialty gardens include a kitchen garden, children's garden, climber garden and the bride's garden.

There will be plants for the door prize table and refreshments after the meeting. Open to the public; admission is free.

For details call Louise DeJames at 301-890-4733 or visit www. beltsvillegardenclub.org.

New Deal Café Offers Good Food, Good Entertainment

by Lori Martin

I moved to Greenbelt five years ago. After living in Glasgow, Scotland for two years I longed for a place with a similar sense of community, walkability and culture. Greenbelt fit the bill, in large part because of the many co-operatives in this community.

My favorite cooperative is the New Deal Café. I am proud to be a member and I visit the Café frequently. Stop by some time and you'll probably find me there.

This comfortable restaurant has provided me with a place to feel at home, to be connected to others, to be creatively stimulated and entertained, as well as to eat great food and now and then enjoy a beer with friends.

Often I think about how grateful I am that the Café continues to exist and has not been squeezed out by nearby impersonal and mundane chains. The New Deal Café is unique and vibrant and only possible with the joint efforts of many people doing what they are able to contribute.

Since December 30, 1995, the Café has served as living room, dining room and family room for our community. We are a non-stock, cooperative membership corporation with over 200 members financially supporting the café and taking part in annual meetings, committees and other volunteering.

A board is elected and manages the Café. Right now our hardworking board members are Bill Wilkerson, Peter May, Terry Rutledge, Don Comis and Pat Brent. It is not only a place to get excellent Mediterranean food but also a place for the community to grow and deepen through this unique model of cooperation.

A few of the outstanding dishes served up at the Café include falafel, tabbouleh, shawarma, kabab, salmon and lamb. My favorite is the fatayer – or cheese, meat or spinach pies.

Delectable desserts such as chocolate mousse, caramel crunch cake and crème brulee satisfy the sweet tooth. Along with Zeke's coffee and a selection of hot teas and cold beverages, the Café also serves many microbrew beers, both bottled and on tap, as well as international wines by the glass and bottle.

Arts Offerings

Among the wide variety of arts and entertainment at the New Deal are art displays that change monthly, wine tastings, cook-offs, movie nights and almost nightly music performances. One such performer is the famous Buck Hill, a living legend, who has been dazzling audiences for over 40 years. He has played his tenor saxophone with Dizzy Gillespie, Miles Davis, Charlie Byrd and Shirley Horn. Hill's performances and recordings have received great acclaim in the New York Post and the Village Voice.

Eric Brace of the Washington Post said of his latest record, "Uh Huh! Live at Montpelier," that it contains "eight original compositions that are so melodically complete and so structurally satisfying that I wonder if they might become standards someday." Buck Hill performs monthly with the Magic Ray Jazz ensemble. Their next collaboration will be Saturday, November 15 at 8 p.m. Hill is just one of the many excellent musicians who grace the stage at the New Deal Café.

In all cooperatives the more we cooperate, the better we are. Come visit the Café and support us by dining. You'll meet chef Karim, his wife Maria, who makes excellent soups and desserts, and friendly staff members like Aliu, Jose and Pat, to name a few

To find out more about upcoming events, performances and food specials visit our website, www.newdealCafe.com, or stop by and ask the staff. Consider becoming a member of the New Deal Café or if you are already a member, consider joining one of our committees or running for the board. We need everyone's input for this exciting venture. You are always welcome at the Café.

Two New Discussion Circles Now Forming

Two Discussion Circles are now forming to help Greenbelters "walk lightly on and take action on behalf of the Earth." "Menu for the Future" will explore the connection between food and sustainability. Topics include local versus organic, a more just food system and the impacts of big industrial farming on society and the environment. This eight-session circle will begin on Tuesday, October 21 from 7 to 9 p.m. in the Greenbelt Community Center, Room 112/Gallery.

"Global Warming: Changing CO2urse" will explore the history and science of global warming, personal values and habits as they relate to climate change and personal actions to curb the effects of global warming. This six-session circle will begin Thursday, October 23 from 7 to 9 p.m. in Room 103 of the Greenbelt Community Center.

These courses provide an enjoyable, supportive setting in which to examine personal values and habits, engage in stimulating conversation, create meaningful community and consider ways to take action toward creating a more sustainable future.

Participants should just show up at the first meeting and will decide days and times to meet thereafter. These discussion circles are peer-facilitated and each will be composed of from 8 to 12 people who commit to meeting together for six or eight sessions. A volunteer mentor will get group sessions started.

Greenbelt Credit Union First Co-op in New Town

by Cindy Comproni

There were no banking facilities when the first families moved into Greenbelt, so a group of pioneer residents put their heads together and decided to organize a credit union. The charter for the Greenbelt Federal Credit Union was issued on December 13, 1937. It became the first community credit union in the area, the first financial institution and one of the first two co-ops in Greenbelt.

A federal credit union is a nonprofit, cooperative financial institution owned and run by its members. Organized to serve, democratically-controlled credit unions provide their members with a safe place to save and borrow at reasonable rates. Members pool their funds to make loans to one another. The volunteer board is elected by its members and runs each credit union through its general manager. "Not for profit, but for service" is a credit union motto.

The new organization thrived and steadily increased in size, assisted later by the Co-op store operations, which provided space without charge for the expanding credit union.

During the early years, the credit union was considered the stork's right-hand man in Greenbelt. The Credit Committee was frequently called upon for emergency meetings to provide funds for a new arrival, and, it was hoped, a new member in the future.

Greatest Challenge

In 1952, Greenbelt Federal Credit Union was faced with its greatest challenge. The Public Housing Administration, which was selling the Greenbelt project, announced that down payments on at least 500 of the homes must be made by the end of the year in order for the resident-formed corporation to buy the project. The majority of the required down payments were financed through the credit union.

In 1970 the National Credit Union Administration was created to charter and supervise federal credit unions and the National Credit Union Share Insurance Fund (NCUSIF) also was organized to insure credit-union deposits. In the independent credit-union spirit, the NCUSIF was created without tax dollars, capitalized solely by credit unions.

The Greenbelt field of membership was expanded through merger acquisitions including one with the Consumer Co-op Federal Credit Union. Eligibility now includes all residents of Greenbelt, persons employed in Greenbelt, members of Greenbelt Consumer Co-op, those who worship or attend school in Greenbelt and their family members.

Service Expansions

Expansion of services accompanied the expansion of membership. Today the wide range of services offered by the credit union include Regular Share Savings Account, Share Certificate, Money Market, Individual Retirement Account (IRA), Roth IRA, Educational IRA, and Share Draft Checking Account. Other services include online banking, audio-response system, VISA gift cards and travel cards, ATM machine, VISA credit card and VISA Check Card and loans.

The Credit Union recently joined the Co-op Network, a network of credit unions which allows its members access to surcharge-free ATMs located at credit unions and 7-Eleven stores
